Adoption

Adoption Efforts

Animals that were previously at risk for euthanasia are given the opportunity to find forever loving homes.

TNR

TNR (Trap, Neuter and Release)

Most states, especially Arizona, battle with an overpopulation of homeless animals. Un-altered feral cats are trapped, spayed or neutered and then returned to the community of origin.

Community Outreach

Community Outreach

Provide education and resources to those in need including the homeless / low-income homes in need of food and / or veterinary assistance.

Our Adoption Process

Currently, it is an Almost Entirely Manual Process

Why This Process is So Important

As a 100% volunteer-based organization, time is precious. As we approach 1,000 animals per year saved and adopted, the time burden is enormous, but absolutely necessary.

Forever Homes are Paramount

Bad matches can often result in animals being left to fend for themselves or left at shelters (sometimes for the second time)

Pictures are NOT Worth a Thousand Words

Adopters many times fall in love with pictures online and ignore the incompatibilities

Pets Can and Do Live Upwards of Twenty years

Adopting a pet is a long-term commitment. A pet is often times with you through life changes (move, job change, marriage, children, etc.)
